

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a cage for inclined ball bearings with adjacent ball pockets separated from each other by means of lands, whereby elastically-deformable retainer lugs extend from the lands with flanks facing opposing directions and facing each other.